

"This website has been created as a marketing material and should not be viewed as an offer to sell or a solicitation for investment into the company. Everything described herein should be considered for information purposes only.

This website represents an overview of the WasiHub project as well as the measures and technologies that should be implemented in order to reach the objectives of the project. Any forward-looking statements expressed herein by such terms as “probably”, “estimate”, “could”, “believe”, “will” and the other similar ones are given on the website to show quite a high degree of probability inherent in the WasiHub project.

Statements made in this website, other than those concerning historical information, should be considered forward-looking and subject to various risks and uncertainties. Such forward-looking statements which are generally preceded by, followed by or that otherwise include the words “believes”, “expects”, “anticipates”, “intends”, “estimates”, or similar expressions are made based on management’s current expectations or beliefs as well as assumptions made by, and information currently available to management. A variety of factors could cause actual results to differ materially from those anticipated in the forward-looking statements. No guaranty is given that we can achieve the plans described herein. Anyone interested in investing in the company is strongly recommended to refer to the “Risk Factors” section of the whitepaper before making a final decision. The risks and uncertainties determined in the section are the factors due to which the events described in the present whitepaper may never occur. Hence, any decision with regard to participating in the WasiHub project is to be made by the readers of Whitepaper on their own”.
